Memories of two years of disaster: planning, implementation and learning through the journey of the Dachau Trials. The Dachau Trial of 1946 was the most important international criminal trial in post-war Germany. The trial sought to put into evidence the war crimes committed by the Nazi government against the Jewish people. The prominent jurist Erwin Nāck and the eminent European jurist Nikolaus Fāldner were the judges who sat as presiding judges. They assessed the evidence that the Allies presented at the trial. This article describes the context of the trial, the evidentiary circumstances, the 'jurisprudence' of the trial, and its consequences for the future of the post-war German judiciary. It has been reported that a very lucky couple will have a very royal engagement. It was officially announced that Prince Harry and Markle are planning to marry after the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge wrapped up their first
