Read more.[The immunosuppressive effect of in vitro-induced T regulatory cells]. Conventional immunosuppression using drugs is the most common therapy for suppressing graft-versus-host disease (GvHD) after hematopoietic stem cell transplantation (HSCT). However, chronic immunosuppression has been shown to be associated with an increased risk of infections and a higher incidence of malignancies. Recent studies have shown that donor regulatory T cells (Treg) play an important role in the control of an immune response. In this study, we induced Tregs with anti-CD3 antibody-coated beads in vitro in the presence of IL-2 and showed that in vitro-induced Tregs (iTreg) significantly reduced GvHD in mice. In vitro-induced Tregs inhibited the proliferation of effector T cells, especially the proliferation of allospecific effector T cells. It is noteworthy that iTregs expressed a similar phenotype to CD4+CD25+ Tregs in vivo and in vitro, which is an important factor for the suppression of T cells. We also demonstrated that the in vitro-induced Tregs suppress GvHD via cell-contact and soluble factors. Additionally, we observed that polyclonal IgG prevented GvHD by suppressing both allospecific T cells and
