Requirements: Microsoft Word 2000/2002 Limitations: 30 day trial Washington (CNN) Republican Rep. Steve King said Monday that former White House staffer Omarosa Manigault Newman did have a role in the upcoming interview, which he seemed to rule out. "Omarosa is in the room, and Omarosa has a role in this interview, but she's really not gonna be acting as any sort of a social media maven or an advance person," King told host Bill Hemmer on "America's Newsroom." Trump on Thursday declined to offer a complete apology for his remarks about Manigault Newman, who he called "a crazed, crying lowlife" during an interview with The New York Times on Wednesday. During that interview, Trump appeared to make a reference to Manigault Newman's personal life, saying "She's recently been disparaging me. She worked for me, she worked at the White House," referring to her time working in the White House as director of communications for the Office of Public Liaison. "She's a very sick person," Trump said. "I think you better let her go. She's nothing but trouble for the president and for the country. You know what I'm saying? When I see it, I'm going to stick by my people." A person familiar with Manigault Newman's plans told CNN that she intended to release a book and a documentary about her time in the Trump White House. King said on Sunday that he does not believe Manigault Newman will be able to talk about her time in the White House on the show, which will air its first episode on Thursday at 9 p.m. ET on Fox News. "I would think that Omarosa would probably be able to say that there was no direct evidence that she ever heard the president use that language," he said. When asked if Manigault Newman will be able to talk about the Trump administration, King said that he does not think she will. "I believe that the White House has made it clear they are not going to participate
